Port of Seattle Commission held Community Meeting on Tree Removal Program

The Port's Community Meeting held at Bow Lake Elementary on Tuesday evening was attended by more than 100 local residents, mostly from SeaTac. The Meeting and Open House was on the Airport's proposed Flight Corridor Safety Program that will remove 3,000 trees around Sea-Tac Airport in the next 3 years.

The Port had various display stations with details about the project, its connection with FAA regulations, and plans to plant new and shorter trees and shrubs. Airport staff answered individual questions during the Open House portion. During the Community Meeting, the elected Port Commissioner's received many comments, questions and detailed information from the audience.

The Commissioners did not take any action about the proposed program at the meeting. The City's appeal of the Port's initial environmental determination is still pending resolution, either by mutual agreement or by a decision in Superior Court.

For more information read Frequently Asked Questions or to comment on the Port's proposed program, visit www.portseattle.org/safecorridor.
