YMCA's Aaron Fox is the director of an outreach program that has him on and off the streets helping young adults stay safe, away from gangs, violence and drug activities. They will meet these young adults wherever and whenever and also visit the schools here in SeaTac. A majority are students at Tyee High School. They have outpatient, foster care, mental health, social services and many other resources for youth at risk. Marvin Marshall is also with Alive and Free and is on and off the streets helping young adults and leading them in a positive direction. Anica Stieve is the director of LINC and talked about the program. Chelsea Morgan with Center for Children and Youth Justice is a probation counselor and helps guide clients and get them the help they need while keeping them on track with probation. Kelly Rogers is the director of DAWN Prevention. DAWN is the only 24/7 confidential shelter in King County. They have legal advocates who can help assist with protection orders, parenting plans, legal paperwork and will even meet the client in a confidential location to help with needs. They have one full time staff member who is strictly Mental Health services. They offer support groups, classes, youth counseling and in home family services.

New Business
