We served a mom that was looking for care for her 3 year old daughter. Her search was a standard one. She has a 16 year old so she had done the child care search before. At first the way she came across was that she had done the whole child care before and knew everything. As we began to give her information about what to look for in a quality child care program, we didn't she was going to want to hear it. We told her that we know she had a lot of experience in searching for child care and we now share some quality indicators with families to help them in their search and would she be interested in going over them. She said yes – she was interested and then proceeded to have questions after that. We ended up having a really good conversation. Then I told her about the survey and she said that she had to say that having done the whole referral/child care search process 13 years ago it was way better now. 😊
